Clinton issues Iraq warning GSS may elect new president

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- President Clinton warned Iraq on Thursday he will brook no threats to allied aircraft patrolling the no-fly zones. He spoke after two U.S. warplanes fired at an Iraqi radar that had targeted them.

"We're going to stay with our policy," Clinton told reporters as he met with his senior staff on his first full day in office. "It is the American policy and that's what we're going to stay with."

The clash ended a brief respite in hostilities between Washington and Baghdad that began Tuesday when Saddam Hussein ordered a "cease-fire" in honor of Clinton's inauguration.

In Baghdad, the Iraqi News Agency quoted an unidentified official as denying that a radar had been turned on and claimed the U.S. planes' attack set a fertilizer storage area on fire and damaged crops. It also said

Iraq is sticking to its cease-fire "despite the behavior of the U.S. plane, which was aggressive and provocative."

At the Pentagon, spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Joseph Gradisher dismissed the Iraqi claim that no radar had been turned on.

"We stand by our report," Gradisher said. Secretary of State Warren Christopher, in remarks at the State Department, echoed Clinton's resolve.

"The United States intends to protect our pilots in the no-fly zone," Christopher said. "... When their radar illuminates our pilots we are going to protect our pilots."

The new secretary said the Iraqis "know perfectly well what it takes to comply with the U.N. resolutions and the establishment of the no-fly zones. I think what happened today is a reflection of the determination that the Clinton administration will have in that area."

Clinton's spokesman, George Stephanopoulos, said the new president was following established policy, allowing U.S. pilots to defend themselves when threatened.

"Right now everything we're doing is consistent with past practice. There is no change at this time," he said.

The incident occurred at 5:09 a.m. EST, the military said in a statement.

A U.S. Air Force F-4G "Wild Weasel" and an F-16 "Fighting Falcon" were escorting a French Mirage plane conducting photo reconnaissance in the northern no-fly zone, the statement said.

The two U.S. jets noticed flashes of anti-aircraft fire in their direction, but did not respond to the provocation "because the aircraft were out of range of the fire," the statement said.

After the radar "locked on" the aircraft, the F-4G fired an anti-radar HARM missile at the radar and the F-16 dropped two cluster bombs on the site.

Graduate Student Senate may or may not elect a new president today to replace Tony Fluellen who recently resigned, according to GSS Vice President David Vaillencourt.

GSS elections are not a closed process and senators may make nominations from the floor. The senate can also choose whether they want to elect a president or appoint one.

"They have a lot of options," Vaillencourt said. "But I'm hoping they choose to resolve this at the meeting [today]."

Although anyone could be nominated for the office, officially only two candidates are running for the position, Clarke Cummings and Ted Eaton.

Cummings, 23, is pursuing a master's degree in mathematics. He said he is running for the position because the Senate needs someone who really wants it.

"I enjoy working with people, although sometimes I'm too idealistic," he said. "I want to change a lot of things that I probably never will be able to."

Cummings said he wants to be a voice for graduate students.

Baird refuses to step down

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- A combative Zoe Baird, President Clinton's choice for attorney general, on Thursday rejected calls to step aside. The White House stuck by her in the face of rising public and congressional opposition over her hiring of illegal aliens.

White House Communications Director George Stephanopoulos said Clinton may never have discussed the pivotal issue with Baird prior to her nomination.

"I think that my overall record gives me the potential to be a great attorney general," Baird told the Senate Judiciary Committee. "The potential that I have to serve this country ... should override the particular incident."

Several members of Congress announced their opposition, including one Republican on the Judiciary Committee and the lone Republican among the Senate's six women.

Baird, 40, a $500,000-a-year lawyer for the Aetna Life & Casualty Co., has since her nomination paid $2,900 in fines and roughly $12,000 in back taxes for employing a Peruvian couple. The wife cared for her son while the husband served as her driver and performed household chores, she said.

Questions about the Baird nomination dominated the first White House news briefing Thursday by Stephanopoulos.

"The president continues to think she'd make a good attorney general," he said. "Right now, Zoe Baird is his nominee. ... Give her a chance to answer the questions."

Quizzed about Clinton's knowledge of her lawbreaking before he nominated her, Stephanopoulos said the details and timing were "rather murky."

"I don't know the nature of his exact discussions on this. Zoe Baird ... did disclose this to the transition team," he said. But when she met with Clinton, "I do not believe they had a discussion about it, no," he said.

"I do not know what level of detail he knew about the situation. ... We can find out absolutely."

On Jan. 14, Clinton spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers said: "It was fully disclosed. He (Clinton) considered it and did not think it was a problem."

Alleged rapist still loose

Police say latest attack follows pattern of past incidents

by Melanie L. Krajewski
police reporter

Bowling Green police are still looking for the man who allegedly committed the attempted rape that occurred last Saturday and may be responsible for three other sexual assaults reported last fall.

Police said the latest attack followed the pattern of the past incidents -- the suspect seems to sneak into the victim's home at night or early morning and tries to rape them. In three of the cases, the suspect ran away when the victim woke up.

"The rapist seems to achieve gratification from prowling around and touching his victims in improper areas," Det. Brad

"It might be the rapist is a student or it could be he only wants to attack ... [college students] who might have went home for the break."

Det. Brad Conner,
Bowling Green Police
Division

Conner said.

Police said they have received a lot of information from victims who reported their attacks. Also, police have received tips and leads from over 50 phone calls after the rapist's composite was in the paper last fall.

Conner said the rapist seems to strike every couple of weeks, although there have been no reported attacks over the Christmas break.

"It might be the rapist is a student or it could be he only wants to attack women in their 20s, [college students] who might have went home for the break. It is still early to say and we will continue the investigation," Conner said.

Ash said although police are working hard on the case, individuals need to better protect themselves by being aware and careful.

"We still want people to be careful," Ash said. "Keep your doors locked and lights on."

Well-wishers greet Bushes as they become private citizens

The Associated Press

HOUSTON -- More than 500 well-wishers, many carrying signs, flags and balloons, greeted George Bush as he returned to his adopted hometown Wednesday as a private citizen.

"It's back to the real world for the Bushes," the former president said in a welcome-home appearance that resembled a campaign rally. "There's a time to stay, a time to go, a time to fold 'em. Our only objective is to be good, helpful, private citizens."

He arrived at Ellington Field, southwest of Houston, in a government jet about four hours after President Clinton was sworn in. The change from president to private citizen was readily apparent.

The normal security checkpoints were absent for those wishing to greet Bush. The traditional press pool that travels with the president also was absent, at Bush's request.

And the fleet of helicopters, a large Secret Service entourage and the ever-present trailing ambulance were all gone.

The ex-president and Barbara Bush climbed into a silver-gray Cadillac that was near the front of a small motorcade.

"It feels good to be back and know that you're not going to be called away," said James A. Baker III, former White House chief of staff and secretary of state under Bush.

Baker was among several old friends and staff members who accompanied the Bushes to Houston and "told a lot of jokes" on the upbeat flight, said Rich Bond, the outgoing Republican national chairman.

After working the crowd, sharing many hugs and kisses, the Bushes headed to their new neighborhood in west Houston, where they are building a home and will live in the meantime in a nearby rental house.

E.A.R. to the Ground...

Well it's finally over.

After weeks of listening to the hype about the inauguration, many of us in the media covering the ceremony paid way too much attention to the fact that Hillary Clinton decided to wear a different dress than originally planned.

We at E.A.R. Central wonder who the heck cares? Should we, as a nation, be so fixated on the fashion sense (or lack thereof) of our First Family? This is a bad, bad thing. It's people like us who fall over ourselves to catch a glimpse of Socks the cat, find out what kind of sauce President Clinton uses on his McNuggets (hot mustard, we reckon) and the like.

Maybe if this nation's larger media organizations focused more on the issues, we'd see less headlines like: "Marylin Quayle offers Chelsea family retainer!" (in other news, President Clinton bombed Toronto!)

Speaking of President Clinton, doesn't that just sound weird? Say it with us: "President Clinton." Kinda has an awkward ring to it ... like "Senator Oprah" or "Vice President Geraldo." Maybe it's just us.

"Don't Stop (Thinking about Tomorrow)" is the unofficial song and motto of the Clinton campaign/presidency, as we're sure you know. Stevie "Don't Stop (Thinking about a Salad Bar)" Nicks and the kids in Fleetwood Mac even performed the infectious ditty Tuesday night at the inaugural gala.

But what song will President Bubba's main competitors choose in 1996? We here at E.A.R. have some ideas:

□ Al Gore (if he jumps ship to compete against his boss): "Pictures of Matchstick Men."

□ Pat Buchanan: "(I Hate Everything About You.)"

□ Jesse Jackson: "Rainbow (Coalition) Connection."

□ Bob Packwood: "Why Don't We Get Drunk (and Screw)?"

□ Dan Quayle: "Never Gonna Get It" (or) "The Alphabet Song."

With the new year and our new president comes a very special time of year. Yes, it's Girl Scout cookie time.

We here at The News are very excited about the prospects of stocking up for the long winter months, but we also have some advice for the Girl Scout cookie-making people: Stop scrimping on the Caramel deLites! These square biscuits of chocolate, caramel and coconuts may be the single greatest achievement in the Western Hemisphere this century. But you pay $2.50 for, like, three in a box; meanwhile, Thin Mints and those peanut butter deals are delivered by the truckload to your house, multiply ... and you never really finished chewing 'em

Give us more Caramel deLites or give us death!

Revisionaries nonsensical

Last week I received my semesterly dosage of Holocaust revisionist literature. It was on my way back from a class when I passed a friendly looking bearded man handing out pamphlets. I took one and glanced at it before even getting back to my dorm. "The Case for Teaching Holocaust Revisionism in our Colleges and High Schools" blared the top of the brochure. I must admit, although I usually try to be open-minded about different viewpoints, this stuff seems pretty ridiculous, even offensive to me in its implications.

Holocaust revisionists are those people who believe that the Holocaust was just a big hoax that never actually happened. They claim Jews were NOT exterminated in poison gas chambers or deliberately starved; instead, the six million who perished in concentration camps died as a result of diseases like typhus. Other Nazi atrocities are also lies, they claim.

According to Holocaust revisionists, the concentration camp scenes we are all familiar with were staged by American G.I.s and photographed so they'd be viewed as more than propaganda; any torture devices in these scenes are referred to as props. American G.I.s supposedly made Holocaust films to re-educate the German people by destroying their national pride. Interesting notions, but do they possess any morsel of validity?

Holocaust revisionists believe that our government and media have distorted and continue to distort the facts about the concentration camps. Well, what about the survivors of these camps? Are they distorting the facts as well? I don't think so. Why would so many people make up so many stories about such ordeals and horrors? Who would want to discuss these painful experiences if they weren't true? According to Holocaust revisionists, over 10,000 eyewitness testimonies about atrocities have been shown to be false. I wonder just what their standards are for deeming certain testimonies untrue.

The very fact that there have been so many testimonies seems incriminating to me. What would be the motivation or benefits of recounting such tales if they were untrue? Why would tens of thousands of individuals be recounting such tales if they were untrue?

Holocaust revisionists admit that brutality did occur in the concentration camps. However, they would like all of us to believe this violence was not inflicted by the prison guards but rather happened between the prisoners themselves. I quote from a Holocaust revisionist pamphlet which compares these prisoners with "Common criminals of the same stripe as those who populate U.S. prisons today."

How can they possibly draw a comparison between the innocent inhabitants/victims of Nazi concentration camps and common criminals? Holocaust revisionists are indirectly stating that the Jews at the prison camps deserved to be held there as though they had committed crimes; but their only "crime" was their heritage. This attitude and assumption of the Holocaust revisionists clearly demonstrates their prejudice against Jews, and it invalidates the rest of their arguments by placing them in a context of anti-semitism.

One main point of the Holocaust revisionist literature is its claim that 'students and professors should be free to investigate the Holocaust in the same way they are free to investigate all other historical events. This is not a radical point of view.'

Is there really enough valid information to warrant serious investigation of this information, though? I see no huge problem with the case of Holocaust revisionism being mentioned in appropriate history classes, but I don't see how open-minded, unbiased students (or professors) could possibly be convinced by the tentative information available in this area. Sure, students (and professors) should examine historical issues from different perspectives, but some viewpoints just don't have enough validity to warrant insulting a whole race of people.

SSS helps those Clinton's actions "with" a chance not a big surprise

To the Editor:
A recent article in The News about the Student Support Services had a very misleading title: "SSS helps those without a chance."

The Student Support Services program is a federally funded program designed to provide academic services to assist, retain and graduate students enrolled in the program at the University. To participate in this program, students must be admitted to the University and also meet federal guidelines for participation: first generation and/or low income or have a learning or physical disability.

500 students are selected annually to participate in this program. Services offered to these students include academic and financial aid counseling, writing workshops, special sections of certain classes, as well as individual and small group tutoring.

Many participants have done very well in their classes. Some are currently tutors in Academic Enhancement. Many past participants have graduated, some are attending graduate school, and many have excellent positions in both the public and private sectors of the economy.

The successes of these students attest to the fact that students participating in this program indeed do have a chance.

To the Editor:
In his Jan. 19, 1993 column, Mike Sears expresses his realization that "Clinton promised America everything and only now are we realizing he can't possibly do all he said he would." Only now are you realizing this? Well, I have some news for you, Mike. Many, many people realized this a long time ago. But for those of you who are just beginning to wake up to this realization, allow me to point out some examples of where President Clinton has already started to back out of his campaign promises:

Candidate Clinton said he would reduce the White House staff by 25 percent -- President

Clinton said this may no longer be possible.

Candidate Clinton said he wanted to change the policy on allowing Haitian refugees into the country -- President Clinton has now said that he is not able to change this policy.

Candidate Clinton said that he wanted to lift the ban on homosexuals in the military -- President Clinton has now said that this may not actually be possible.

Candidate Clinton said that he wanted a middle-class income tax cut -- President Clinton now says that such a tax cut will most likely be impossible.

While you may only now be realizing that Clinton cannot do everything he pledged to do, this is exactly what opponents of Bill Clinton said over and over again throughout the campaign.

But not to worry. Electing Bill Clinton president of the United States is a mistake that we can easily rectify in 1996. All of that aside, there is something upon which I do agree with you, Mike. "God bless the United States of America." We very well may need it.

AIDS Memorial Quilt will be shown in BG

by Ginger Phillips
general assignment

The AIDS Memorial Quilt is a gigantic piece of work created to represent a small portion of Americans who have died from the AIDS virus. The quilt travels around the world in pieces and now it is coming to the University.

The quilt is brought to campus through the NAMES project which is composed of concerned University and community organizations.

Greg MacVarish, general co-chair of the project, said the quilt brings meaning and reality to the number of people who have died from AIDS by allowing individuals to take a peek into the victims' lives.

"It's a way to collectively draw attention to the magnitude of the problem to the country."

James Smith, publicity chairman of the NAMES project

"It's designed to promote awareness and education of AIDS," MacVarish said.

James Smith, publicity chairman of the NAMES project, said the quilt began in 1987 as a way of helping people remember those lost to the disease.

"It's a way to collectively draw attention to the magnitude of the problem to the country," Smith said.

The quilt has over 22,000 panels, but only represents about 13 percent of Americans who have died from the illness.

The quilt will be displayed in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom from Feb. 20 to Feb. 22. Volunteers are needed to set up and breakdown the display, for sales and information, as quilt monitors, readers and for volunteer support.

Applications are available in 425 Student Services and are due Jan. 29. All volunteers must attend one training session where volunteer jobs will be explained.

Additional volunteer information can be obtained from David Vaillancourt at 419-372-8342.

News for coffee lovers: new cafe opens today

by Lisa Corsi
city reporter

The residents of Bowling Green have another place to get a good cup of cappuccino. A new coffeehouse, Cafe Shadeau, is opening today, offering specialty pastry, soups and sandwiches as well as a variety of coffees and cappuccinos.

Owner Rich Mariea described the atmosphere as "very casual...a place to get a good cup of cappuccino."

"I like the town. I just like the small town atmosphere and the location was excellent."

Rich Mariea, owner of
Cafe Shadeau

Cafe Shadeau will feature latte, a special espresso coffee. Mariea also said the coffee shop will have a drink called a shooter, consisting of a five ounce cup of espresso with milk and syrup.

"It will help students get going in the morning," Mariea said.

Marica said he used to frequent the coffeehouses in Ann Arbor, Mich. and in the Columbus area. He said he liked the relaxed atmosphere where one could just sit for an hour and drink espresso and decided he would eventually open a coffeehouse of his own.

"I said to myself 'Some day I am going to do this,' " Mariea said.

Cafe Shadeau marked a career change for Mariea. Mariea, 52, worked with the low voltage systems which are used in electrical intercoms for business for 25 years.

"I was ready for a different career," he said. "And a coffeehouse is a great business to me," added Mariea.

Marica, a Toledo native, decided to build a cafe in Bowling Green because of the atmosphere and location.

"I like the town. I just like the small town atmosphere and the location was excellent," he said.

Bowling Green is still large enough for two coffeehouses, according to Mariea.

"Cappuccino is getting more and more popular," he said.

He added that other businesses in Bowling Green besides Grounds for Thought sell espresso because of the growing popularity and demand.

Grounds For Thought Co-Owner Laura Wicks said she also believes the new coffeehouse will be culturally beneficial to the area.

"We look forward and wish [Cafe Shadeau] success. We are excited by any small business that brings more diversity to Bowling Green and continues to enrich Bowling Green's atmosphere," Wicks said.

The official grand opening of Cafe Shadeau is scheduled for the weekend of Jan. 29 to Jan. 31. The cafe is open weekdays from 7 a.m. to midnight and tentatively open weekends until 1 a.m. The coffeehouse is located on the corner of South College Drive and East Wooster Street.

Opening today, the Cafe Shadeau will offer the Bowling Green community a new place to relax and drink a cup of cappuccino. Owner Rich Mariea, who described the atmosphere of his new cafe as relaxing and casual, said he got the idea from visiting coffeehouses in Ann Arbor, Mich. and Columbus.

Man arrested hours after release from county jail

by Melanie L. Krajewski
police reporter

A man was arrested Wednesday for criminal damaging less than six hours after he was released from the county jail. The suspect, intoxicated, allegedly used a stolen girl's, 20-inch Huffy bike to break a window of a Napoleon Road apartment.

William M. Szymanski, 36, Wayne, was removed from his car at gunpoint when he returned to the crime scene a few hours later. He was incarcerated in Wood County Justice Center on $5500 bond and is scheduled to appear in court Jan. 25.

"This case was an interesting one. Szymanski had just posted bond to get out of jail for his felony charge," Police Chief Galen Ash said.

Szymanski was in the Wood County Justice Center for two weeks for a felonious arrest and a felony charge the Perrysburg Police Department refused to specify. In that incident, Szymanski abducted a girl and led police on a high speed chase through Perrysburg.

According to the police report, the victim and a witness were sitting inside the apartment, when they heard a back bedroom window break. They ran to the room, grabbed the victim's child from her bedroom and called the police.

New population estimates in Northwest Ohio's transportation, social service money on the line

The Associated Press

TOLEDO — The state has accepted arguments that northwestern Ohio's population won't decrease as much as predicted, a Toledo official said.

The figures are important because they're used to determine the amounts of federal and state grants for transportation, development, water and social service projects.

The Ohio Department of Development's initial figures, released in November, projected population losses from 3 percent in Wood County to 22 percent in Paulding County.

After the state released its numbers, officials in 10 northwestern Ohio counties met to show why the figures were wrong. Steve Arndt, chairman of the Metropolitan Area Council of Governments and an Ottawa County commissioner, said Wednesday the state has accepted the new numbers.

The new figures project an increase of 4.3 percent for the region through the year 2015, with eight of the 10 counties showing population growth.

Oil spill occurs Rape common Serb war tactic off Indonesia

The Associated Press

SINGAPORE -- A supertanker carrying 78 million gallons of oil collided with another ship Thursday and was ablaze and drifting off Indonesia. Its crew abandoned ship and an undetermined amount of spilled oil was burning.

Agents for the 260,000-ton Maersk Navigator said its crew of 24 abandoned the supertanker after its collision with the Sanko Honour, an empty 47,344-ton tanker. Crew members from both ships were safe, and no injuries were reported.

Seas were reported calm. "Some oil has spilled into the sea and is on fire," said a statement released in Singapore by A.P. Moller Co. of Copenhagen, owner of the Maersk Navigator.

There was no indication of the extent of the spill.

Moller said the degree of damage to the hull had not been determined.

"Our prime concern now is the crude oil ... and if there is spillage and the spill reaches Malaysian waters, we can expect a disaster," Malaysia's environment minister Law Hieng Ding said in Kuala Lumpur.

The Maersk Navigator was carrying more than 78 million gallons of crude oil from Oman to Japan, a spokesman for General Sekiyu, owner of part of the oil, said in Tokyo. The supertanker was built in South Korea in 1989.

A Moller spokesman said there were no injuries among the supertanker crew, who were taken aboard the passing German container vessel DSR Atlantic.

The Associated Press

GENEVA -- Serb forces in Bosnia have regularly used rape and harassment as part of their campaign to force Muslims and Croats to flee their homes, Amnesty International said Thursday.

The human rights organization said that in some cases, the violations were carried out "in an organized or systematic way, with the deliberate detention of women for the purpose of rape and sexual abuse."

Amnesty International said all warring factions were guilty of human rights abuses, but that Serbs carried by far the most blame.

"Incidents involving the sexual abuse of women appear to fit into a wider pattern of warfare, characterized by intimidation and abuses against Muslims and Croats which have led thousands

"...in practice local political and military officers must have had knowledge of, and generally condoned, the rape and sexual abuse of women."

Amnesty International

to flee or to be compliant when expelled from their home areas out of fear of further violations," said the group, based in London.

Bosnian Serbs have been widely accused of pursuing "ethnic cleansing" campaigns to clear other ethnic groups from areas the Serbs have seized. At least 18,000 people have died in the Serbs' rebellion against a vote by majority Muslims and Croats to make Bosnia independent from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

Amnesty's legal officer, Nick Howen, said it was impossible to estimate the true number of rape victims. He said there was no evidence to back up the figure of 20,000 cited by the European Community.

The group's report was based on interviews conducted by Amnesty International investigators and work by other human rights groups.

Amnesty International cited testimony from Muslim women in the northwestern town of Kijuc. It said eight women were raped by a group of Serb irregulars, including one woman in her mid-60s who was raped by three men.

"Two of the women had their throats slit after the rapes," the report said.

The report also cites evidence given by a 17-year-old Bosnian Muslim to a doctor in Zagreb, Croatia, that she and 23 other women were held by Serbs for three months and raped repeatedly.

Amnesty said it was unclear whether rape was explicitly singled out by political and military leaders as a weapon against their opponents.

"What is clear, however, is that so far effective measures have rarely, if ever, been taken against such abuses, and that in practice local political and military officers must have had knowledge of, and generally condoned, the rape and sexual abuse of women," it said.

A U.N. team is currently in former Yugoslav states gathering evidence on rights abuses and European Community investigators also are working in the region.

Kevorkian assists in ninth suicide

The Associated Press

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. -- Dr. Jack Kevorkian was present at his ninth assisted suicide Wednesday and his attorney said more would come before a temporary state law banning the practice takes effect.

Jack Elmer Miller, 53, was the first man to die with help from Kevorkian, who has helped eight women die since 1990.

Miller inhaled carbon monoxide through a mask at 9:10 a.m. at his home in Wayne County's Huron Township, lawyer Geoffrey Fieger said. Miller suffered from bone cancer that had left him in excruciating pain, Fieger said.

"There will be more deaths," Fieger said. "There is a feeling of desperation among many people out there that time is running out."

Effective March 30, a state law will make assisted suicide a felony for 15 months while the issue is studied. Violators face up to four years in prison and a $2,000 fine.

Miller was diagnosed with cancer in June 1992, Fieger said. A few weeks ago his doctors told him he had only days to live, Fieger said, but he continued to live in terrible pain.

Miller, a tree trimmer, had five children, Fieger said. His fiancée, Cynthia Lee Coffey, was present at his suicide, the lawyer said.

Coffey wrote to Kevorkian about two months ago about Miller's desire to kill himself, Fieger said. Miller had four siblings who were aware of his plans to die but did not want to be present, Fieger said.

Miller's death will be investigated as a homicide, said Township Police Chief James Caygill. The results of the investigation will be turned over to the Wayne County Prosecutor's Office.

Miller's death was the first involving Kevorkian outside suburban Detroit's Oakland County.

Wayne County Prosecutor John O'Hair would not comment on whether Kevorkian would be charged with a crime.

The incident occurred about 10 miles south of the town of Mosul. There was no immediate report whether any damage had been done to the missile site, the statement said.

The F-4G and F-16 completed their mission "without further incident," the statement said.

A senior Pentagon official, commenting on condition of anonymity, said "We're back in the cat-and-mouse business again," with Iraq. He said the Pentagon isn't sure whether the incident was the result of directions from Baghdad. "Either someone didn't get the word, orders weren't obeyed or all bets are off," the official said.

Allied patrols of the northern and southern no-fly zones will continue, despite Saddam's pledge to end provocative activities.

Baird

"I've said that I believe that what I did was wrong and I apologized for it," Baird said.

Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., a member of the committee, said he believed her behavior would diminish her effectiveness as the nation's top legal officer, especially when it came to enforcing immigration laws.

"I'm talking about your credibility," he said, adding that his opposition was reluctant. "You're my kind of person. I feel very badly about this."

Sens. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, Slade Gorton, R-Wash., and Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan. also announced they would vote against Baird. They and other senators said the calls and mail from constituents was running heavily against the nomination.

"They really do see a difference between personally forgiving a lawbreaker who has paid her fines ... and promoting that lawbreaker to the 'top cop' in the nation," Craig said in a letter asking the committee to reject the nomination.

Swimmers host MAC rival Miami

by David Harpster
sports writer

In basketball and football, it's Bowling Green versus Toledo. In hockey, it's Bowling Green versus Michigan and Michigan State. This weekend at Cooper Pool, it's Bowling Green versus Miami.

These are the rivalries that raise the level of competition among the athletes and heighten the intensity to a fevered pitch.

As far as Mid American Conference swimming rivalries go, the one between the Falcons and the Redskins is undoubtedly one of the fiercest. The two schools have had men's programs longer than other MAC schools and were among the first to start women's programs.

Head coach Brian Gordon acknowledges that no special pep talks are needed in order to get up for Miami. "It's not hard to get motivated for Miami," Gordon said. "When former swimmers of mine come back to see me, one of the first questions they ask is 'How did you do against Miami?' So it's pretty clear the rivalry runs rather deep."

While admitting that this weekend's meet is a huge rivalry, Gordon nonetheless does not attempt to place more importance on it than any other MAC meet. "It has been our philosophy from the beginning of the season that our main goal is to be prepared for the MAC championships at the end of the year," Gordon said. "With that in mind, we have made no special preparations for any meet this year. We are treating this just as we would any other meet."

"It's not hard to get motivated for Miami."

Brian Gordon, swimming head coach

As for the meet itself, it features a showdown between two of the top women's teams in the MAC. Bowling Green will be going for their third consecutive victory over the women from Miami, after having defeated them in Oxford for the first time ever last year.

Co-captain Jody Reed expects Miami to be prepared. "I think they're the team to beat and I expect they'll be ready to come out and race us very hard," Reed said.

On the men's side, Gordon believes his team has a very good opportunity for a victory this weekend. "I feel our men match up very well with Miami, more so than maybe any other team in the MAC. We are strong in many of the areas where they are weak," Gordon said.

"Also, looking at the two teams remaining schedules, it is conceivable that the loser of this meet may go winless in the MAC."

Gordon expects both meets to be close and looks at two things as being keys for the Falcons. "I think that we have a tremendous advantage swimming here in our own facility," Gordon said. "Also, I expect our seniors to step up and have a great meet with this being their final home MAC meet of their careers."

The women kick off the action on Saturday at 1 p.m. followed by the men at 4 p.m. at Cooper Pool.

Not worth Bair-ing the pain

"I don't have any regrets towards or about football. The thing I'll miss the most is the guys because a lot of my close friends are on the team. I'm pretty realistic about things, and as far as I'm concerned, I won't be able to play football ever again." -- Joe Bair, BG's starting strong safety

There are no maybes, ifs, ands or buts. Joe Bair's playing days are over. And it's time to move on.

Anyone watching BG's scintillating 35-34 victory over the University of Nevada had to be extremely excited. I wasn't particularly. I tried, but it was a no go.

You see, something happened midway through the fourth quarter that left me with a sick feeling in my stomach. It was the prone form of strong safety Joe Bair stretched out on the field being attended to by BG trainers and physicians.

At that point, the football game was removed from my mind and the notion that football is inherently a brutal sport, stood in its place.

It's ironic that Bair would be the recipient of this kind of collision and injury. Earlier in the season when I did a feature story on him, the subject of how brutal the game was came up time and time again. Joe remarked how it took him until the following Wednesday for his body to heal after a Saturday game.

I asked him if he was ever afraid of getting seriously hurt. And he responded that his only fear was being matched up against a speedy receiver in the open field one-on-one.

I chuckled at the time, but I wasn't laughing as he was being carried off on a stretcher.

Asked to recall the play, Bair only offers this, "I was free on the field at the time and I was trying to read as many receivers as I could. I saw the tight end come free and I immediately broke for him [Tom Matter] because I knew the ball was going to him."

"I knew it would be a pretty high impact hit because we were both running full-go. I went to hit him and I don't recall anything that happened after that. I blacked out and the next thing I know is the trainers were over me, but I couldn't really see them.

"On the ride to Humana hospital in the ambulance, I remember telling trainer Mike Massaras, 'Please don't let me be paralyzed Mike!' I was really scared."

Bair was diagnosed with a compression of the T-1 vertebra of his Lower Lumbar region courtesy of a 220-pound tight end falling full-force on his back. Bair didn't have to go undergo surgery, but he had to spend a lot of time resting in the hospital.

Finally, one week, dozens of phone calls and continuous letters of support later, Bair was released from the Las Vegas hospital with the realization that he could never play football again.

Though Bair is receiving his bachelor's in Business Administration this May, he had one more year of football eligibility left. In his mind, he no longer has the option, nor the luxury of deciding whether he'll ever play again.

Joe Bair is a normal kid who wants to lead a normal life. Football no longer dances in his dreams. But don't feel sorry for Bair because that's not a tragedy. Not being able to play softball on Sundays or pick-up basketball games with his friends is what he says would have been the "real tragedy."

Important series awaits icers

by Alex Bricker
sports writer

Bowling Green will have an important series this weekend as the sixth place Ferris State Bulldogs and the third place Lake Superior State Lakers visit the Ice Arena for league match-ups. The Falcons host Ferris State Friday and Lake Superior Saturday.

"This has really gotten down to crunch time," head coach Jerry York said. "This series will give us a good chance to make up some ground."

Ferris swept the Falcons two weekends ago by the scores of 4-3 both nights, with the first victory coming in overtime. The Bulldogs are currently one point ahead of BG in the standings with fifteen. BG is currently 7-11 in the CCHA and 12-14 overall, holding onto seventh place.

Sophomore Gary Kitching leads the Bulldogs in scoring with 7 goals and 16 assists for 23 points and is followed on the list by Mike May (10-8-18), and Doug Smith (10-7-17). Four players on the team have 15 points.

Pat Mazzoli and Craig Lisko are the netminders for Ferris and have been sharing the time in goal. Mazzoli has a record of 7-4-1 with a .905 save percentage and a 3.16 goals against average. Lisko is 3-5-2 with a .882 save percentage and a 3.76 GAA.

The toughest game this weekend for the Falcons looks to be against Lake Superior who has 24 points in the league and is only five points out of first place.

Sophomore sensation Brian Rolston leads the team in scoring with 37 points (18-19). Rolston was named to the CCHA and NCAA Championships all tournament teams last season and is currently in fourth place in league scoring with 26 points. Sean Tallaire (15-12-27), Clayton Beddoes (8-19-27), and Steven Barnes (4-22-26) follow Rolston in team scoring.

Blaine Lacher is the number one goalie for the Lakers with a 9-3-2 record, a .895 save percentage, and a 2.67 GAA. Adam Thompson is the back-up to Lacher and has a 4-3-2 record, .867 save percentage, and a 3.24 GAA.

Brian Holzinger leads the Falcons in scoring (22-17-39 overall, 16-12-28 in the CCHA) with Sean Pronger (18-15-33, 15-10-25) in second.

CCHA Rookie of the Year candidate Aaron Ellis continues to be solid in net for the Falcons and will once again get the starting nod at least for Friday. Ellis (9-5-0, .894 save percent and 3.22 GAA) kept the record clean for the Falcons when it comes to penalty shots against the team as he stoned Bronco Chris Brooks on a free shot after Brett Harkins hauled him down on a breakaway. Opposing teams are 0-6 on penalty shots against the Falcons.

Out of 12 games left in the regular season, eight of those are home games and eight of those are also against teams that are above the Falcons in the standings.

"These games could help us get some points in the standings and get us in the bid for home ice during the CCHA playoffs."

Jerry York, hockey head coach

"We've been playing really well in front of our home crowd and the schedule looks to be in our favor," York said. "These games could help us get some points in the standings and get us in the bid for home ice during the CCHA playoffs."

BG entertains Kent at home

by Andy Dugan
sports writer

The gymnastics team will host Kent State on Sunday in their first home meet of the season.

The Golden Flashes are also the first MAC team the Falcons will face this season. According to head coach Charles Simpson, Kent will offer a challenging meet.

"They traditionally have a good team. This will be their first meet of the season. They will be strong and will offer us some very good competition," Simpson said.

After last week's condition of the team, which was plagued with illnesses and injuries, Simpson is looking for a definite improvement.

"Hopefully we'll have some sick people better by meet time. Karen Jordan and Jen Nacca should be ready to compete, and Robin Wall has been looking good at practice this past week," Simpson said.

Simpson also stated that the team will be concentrating on eliminating the falls on the balance beam at this meet in order to be effectively competitive. It is at the balance beam, Simpson said, that meets are won and lost.

The Falcons are optimistic in their first home meet, as their coach projects, "We've been working hard all week for this meet. It will be the first meet for half of the team, and the fact that the meet is at home should prove to be advantageous. We look forward to a good crowd," Simpson said, "It should be a good meet."

The Falcons take on the Golden Flashes at 1 p.m. Sunday in Eppler North.

Thomas prepares for media

Bills star does not want to answer questions of last year

by John F. Bonfatti
The Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — He knows the questions and he has the answers. Just don't expect Thurman Thomas to keep repeating them as wave after wave of interviewers descend on him at the Super Bowl next week.

"The only rule I'm going to have in Pasadena is that I'm only going to answer the touchy questions once," he said. "If people aren't about when they're asked, they're going to have to get a transcript."

Thomas is getting ready for the Buffalo Bills' Super Bowl date with the Dallas Cowboys Jan. 31 by preparing for the inevitable questions about the controversy he generated at last year's Super Bowl.

The touchy questions are: "What happened to your helmet at last year's Super Bowl?" and "Do you still think you're the Michael Jordan of the Bills?"

Thomas missed the first two plays of last year's Super Bowl because he couldn't find his helmet. After the Washington Redskins' 37-24 victory, the missing helmet was cited as evidence that the Bills didn't have their minds on the game.

Thomas explained that someone moved his helmet from the spot under the bench where he'd left it.

"I know people are going to be asking me about my helmet and all that, but that's fine," Thomas said. "People will probably be asking me about that for the rest of my career."

"With all the records and the yardage," he said, "the number one question will be, 'What happened to your helmet?'"

The other question refers to his statement at last year's Super Bowl that he, and not Jim Kelly, was the Michael Jordan of the Bills.

Thomas said he would have answered the question differently had he known that former Bills offensive coordinator Ted Marchibroda had already compared Kelly's role with the Bills to Jordan's with the Chicago Bulls.

"It's just one of those deals where the media gets something that they can get ahold of and turn it all around," he said. "I'm not going to worry about that. I'm just going to go out and answer every question that I possibly can the best way I possibly can." Maybe there will even be a few questions about football. Thomas certainly has some accomplishments to talk about.

Last year, Thomas capped a sensational season by earning the NFL Most Valuable Player and Offensive Player of the Year awards.

This year, he became the first player in NFL history to lead the league in combined yards from scrimmage for four consecutive seasons, breaking Jim Brown's record of three straight. His 2,113 total yards came on 1,487 yards rushing and 626 yards receiving.

"My role is basically to get the offense going," Thomas said. "I think that showed in the Miami game."

Pats hire Parcell

by Howard Ulman
The Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. — Bill Parcells, who left coaching after winning two Super Bowl championships, has agreed to become coach of the struggling New England Patriots, a source close to the team said today.

The team was expected to make the official announcement at a news conference set for 2:15 p.m. EST. The Boston Herald reported today that Parcells and the Patriots came to terms late Wednesday night.

Parcells, who quit after eight years as New York Giants coach in May 1991, succeeds Dick MacPherson, who was fired by the Patriots after the team went 2-14 in his second season.

Hiring their fourth coach in five years allows the Patriots to focus on other ways to rebuild the franchise, such as signing free agents and preparing for the April draft in which they have the first choice.

Parcells brings credibility to a team that missed the playoffs the past six seasons, has four post-season wins in its 33-year history and has struggled at the box office.

Parcells, 51, had been considered the Patriots' top choice, although former Philadelphia Eagles coach Buddy Ryan also was a strong candidate.

CHICAGO — Is Bionic Bo ready to go?

He's got an artificial hip and he's preparing for one final comeback with the Chicago White Sox.

Bo Jackson was impressive Thursday, fielding grounders and taking swings in a batting cage. He topped that by running four, 120-yard sprints to the controlled time of 20 seconds a sprint.

"There's no limp, no pain, the difference from last year is night and day," said Jackson, who did not play an inning last season after having his hip replaced last April.

The Heisman Trophy winner from Auburn, a professional superstar at football and baseball, injured his left hip in a 1991 NFL playoff game for the Los Angeles Raiders.

The Kansas City Royals, for whom he hit 32 home runs and drove in 105 runs in 1989, released him in the spring of 1991 when doctors said he would never play again.

The White Sox gambled and signed him. After torturous rehabilitation, he played in 23 games in September of 1991, hitting three home runs and driving in 14 runs.

Last spring, the pain became unbearable, and he had the hip replaced with a plastic-metal prosthesis. He went into rehabilitation with hip replacement trainer Mack Newton in Phoenix and White Sox trainer Herm Schneider in Chicago.

"Actually it feels like I've never had any problems in the past," Jackson said. "There is no fear factor. That was over after surgery. Herm keeps telling me to slow down."

Schneider said he expects to let Bo go full speed sometime in February.

"We are in uncharted waters," Schneider said. "If something happens, I don't have the answers. We are trying to prevent soreness. He has paid a dear price."

Jackson's routine includes light workouts in the morning, then hitting and fielding sessions at a gymnasium followed by the heavy work with weights every afternoon.

Why the effort when it all could end with one slight breakdown?

"When my mother passed away last year I promised her I would play baseball again and I would get my degree," Jackson said. "I have one more class left."

When he made his decision to return, Jackson was warned of what could go wrong.

"I told them it was my hip, my decision," Jackson said.

And if it doesn't work out?

"I won't sit around and mope. You have to face reality. I'll go to spring training, and if things don't work out, I'll go home and become 'Bo Jackson, businessman.'"

Schneider said when Jackson was rehabilitating in 1991, "I didn't see a lot of light at the end of the tunnel. I didn't let on and Bo didn't let on. Now I see a lot of light at the end of the tunnel."

And the worst scenario?

"If the hip comes loose or the femur fractures," Schneider said. "Then we'd put in another hip and let him lead a normal life. It's a one-shot thing."

FALCON BASKETBALL

BOWLING GREEN vs MIAMI

Men's team rebounding from Ball State defeat

The men's basketball team pulls into the second leg of its two week challenge.

The Falcons, after losing to Ball State 61-59, are on a two week journey that pits them against the four best teams in the conference this season. At the beginning of the week, BG was in a four way tie with the Cardinals, Ohio and Western Michigan. In addition, the Mid-American Conference's pre-season favorite Miami University was trailing by one game after losing to the Bobcats the week before.

And now over the next two weeks, Bowling Green will face them all. The Falcons faulted a little in the first leg against the Cardinals, but must now rebound for their road match-up with the Redskins. They are coming off a 59-43 victory over Central Michigan giving them a 3-2 conference record and a 7-4 overall mark.

In Oxford, the Redskins have been tough to beat. This season they have posted a 4-1 record. The last time the Falcons went to Miami, they were demolished, 67-39, posting their lowest point total since the 1954-55 season with a 32.7 shooting percentage.

The Redskins have won the last four in the series against BG with the Falcons last victory in Oxford coming in a 65-59 win in the 1987-88 season. On the road this season, BG holds a 2-5 overall mark.

This will be the first time the Falcons have seen Miami since

This will be the first time the Falcons have seen Miami since they knocked BG out of the MAC tournament semifinals last year.

they knocked BG out of the MAC tournament semifinals last year. After defeating BG 70-60, the Redskins went on to defeat Ball State 58-57 to win the conference and get a bid to the NCAA tournament.

Bowling Green, which has been shooting 46 percent (327-of-718) from the field, will be up against the best team defense in the conference. Miami has held its opponents to an average of 60 points per game while BG has been averaging 68 points a game and allowing 69 points.

To win, the Falcons will have to rebound from its Ball State loss and to do that, the team will have to step up to their normal level of play, at the very least. For example, sophomore forward Floyd

Miller, who leads the team in rebounding before the Ball State game, grabbed only 2 caroms against the Cardinals.

Women's team defends its conference lead

by Mark DeChant
sports writer

Playtime is over for the women's basketball team.

After an easy, uncontested victory over the hapless Ball State Cardinals on Wednesday night, the Falcons found themselves in a four-way tie for first place.

Bowling Green's 87-58 defeat of the winless Cards, combined with Western Michigan's loss at Ohio University, left four MAC teams with 4-1 conference records. The Falcons (9-4 overall) must now attempt to remain perched at the top when they visit Miami (4-1, 9-4) tomorrow afternoon.

It's like starting 0-0 again," Falcon head coach Jaci Clark said in reference to the conference race. "Everybody gets a clean slate."

Clark realizes the implications of the clash with the Redskins.

"We're going to definitely have to be ready," she said. "Miami sees this as a very important game, as we do also."

Clark foresees a game featuring intense play, especially on the defensive end.

"They're going to put a lot of ball pressure on and be in our faces," she said. "We're going to have to handle that pressure, as well as dish out some of that pressure."

BG has featured balanced scoring this season, a tribute to the team's depth and overall talent. Ten different Falcons have scored in double digits in at least one game this year, and three -- Talita Scott, Lori Albers and Judith Lendvay -- have accomplished this feat 10 times or more.

Against Ball State, a surprise contributor emerged in the form of freshman point guard Jenny Kulics. While her performance was solid in her first extended playing time, the Falcons would love to have starter Susie Cassell back at full strength.

Cassell, who has 77 assists on the season and is shooting 40 percent from three-point range, might return for the Redskins game, according to Clark.

"We're going to take it a day at a time," she said. "We're going to rest her and we'll see what happens on Saturday."

"Susie's a very hard-nosed person," she added. "She can bounce back."

Tip-off is scheduled for 12:15.

BG power forward Andrea Nordmann retains control of the ball in the midst of Ball State's defense. Nordmann is averaging 10.4 points per game and is as perfect 19-19 in free throws while leading the Falcons to a 9-4 record.

Basketball is a family affair for Nordmann

by Erik Pupillo
assistant sports editor

If having good basketball skills is genetic, senior Andrea Nordmann knew she was going to play roundball at the collegiate level as soon as she could walk.

The first team All-Mid-American Conference power forward is only the fourth person in her immediate family to play at the collegiate level.

"My father's 6'10" and played for St. Louis University during the late '50s and early '60s," Nordmann said. "He then played in the NBA for the Knicks, Celtics and the Cincinnati Royals. I know he played with Oscar Robertson."

Her father then went on to coach basketball at Michigan State for six years, serving under John Bennington. However, Nordmann credits her older brothers and her mother for most of her involvement in athletics.

"I really got into sports when I used to go watch my two brothers play baseball, flag football and basketball when I was growing up," Nordmann said. "My mother's also is very athletic. She jogs everyday and encouraged all of us to compete and get involved in athletic events."

And getting involved is what the children did.

Andrea's one brother, Matt, played two years at the Naval Academy with current NBA All-Star David Robinson and then finished out his remaining years at George Washington University.

Her eldest brother, Eric, played at Central Michigan University for three seasons where he shared some court time with current Phoenix Suns guard Dan Majerle. After Eric completed his final year at Alma College of Michigan, he sold his 6'7" frame and basketball skills to a professional team in France where he still currently plays eight months out of the year.

Not to be lost in the shuffle, Andrea earned all-state honors two times during her high school stay where she led the Hornets to three league championships, one district and one regional title.

As for personal accolades, Nordmann exited high school setting four career records in points (1,483), rebounds (1,009), blocked shots (298) and steals (399).

Nordmann was not only a force on the hardwood, but also on the softball diamond and volleyball court where she lettered in both sports. But there was never any confusion as to which sport Nordmann preferred.

"I always thought my best sport was basketball," Nordmann said. "I enjoyed it the most be-

"It was rough to see Lori go down with the injury, but I felt prepared through a good, hard summer of playing that I could handle the responsibility."

Nordmann responded by scoring 12.8 points per game while hauling down almost 8 boards a contest. But for the first time in

Andrea Nordmann

Year	G-GS	FG-A	Pct	FT-A	Pct	Pts	Avg
1990	29-0	27-60	.450	10-17	.588	64	2.2
1991	29-24	149-264	.564	72-98	.735	370	12.8
1992	29-29	176-337	.522	55-68	.809	414	14.3

cause of the pace of the game. You're always moving in basketball whereas you have to take breaks in between points in a sport like volleyball."

Though Nordmann was offered a couple of different scholarships to play volleyball at the collegiate level, she continued to stay on path and stick with roundball.

By her senior season of high school, Nordmann had her choices narrowed down to four universities: Bowling Green, Eastern Michigan, Illinois State and the University of Missouri.

"My final two picks were BG and Missouri, and what made me decide on BG was the fact that the players I spent time with up here when I visited were all very nice to me," Nordmann said. "Also, Coach [Fran] Voll [BG's head coach at the time] told me that we'd be playing teams from the Big Ten and other big schools to get some exposure for the university."

Nordmann's freshman season was typical of any good player entering into not only an established, but high profile program -- it was a learning experience. Though Nordmann played in all 29 games, she only averaged two points a game scoring.

"It wasn't my job to come in and be an immediate starter," Nordmann said. "It was my job to push the starters in practice and to learn from them."

Hard work in the summer, which according to Nordmann is the key to any basketball player improving, combined with Lori Albers season ending in knee injury, vaulted Nordmann into a starting role her sophomore year.

her career, she experienced something that was alien to her -- failure.

"We were such an odd team that season," Nordmann said. "We beat eventual MAC champs Toledo at home and then they beat our brains out by 40 points up at Savage Hall. It was frustrating because one night we'd play well and the next night we'd be terrible."

The Falcon program underwent a face change during the beginning of Nordmann's junior year when Voll stepped down to take a job as an Assistant Athletic Director. Seven year assistant Jaci Clark took control of the reigns with a few weeks left before the season, but according to Nordmann, the team didn't panic.

"Jaci had been with the program for several years, so we knew she wouldn't change anything immediately," Nordmann said. "And obviously everything worked out because we went 24-5, placing two places higher in the MAC than projected and Jaci was the winningest first year coach in the country."

Nordmann shined in Clark's rookie year by averaging 14.3 points and 7.5 rebounds per game while garnering first team All-MAC honors.

For the first time in her four years at BG, the women's basketball team was rated the preseason favorite, a position Nordmann isn't all that comfortable about.

"Everybody wants to beat us because we're favorites," Nordmann said. "Everybody is geared up to play us. Kent CMU, WMU and Toledo all raise their game when they come to play us."

Insider looks at the Good and Bad of the past year

From the Editors...

Your desperate, wild calls for the return of Insider Magazine have been heard, and we the zookeepers are ready to give it to you. Get ready for a brand new Insider semester complete with exciting movie, book and music reviews, tantalizing feature stories, captivating photos, and just darned fun-filled entertainment.

Formally esteemed Insider editor Matthew Daneman and his honorable mascot Sasha the Duck have taken their vaudeville act on the road, and we expect telephone calls requesting cash any day now (all in tens and twenties, of course). We wish them well, however, and miss them both deeply—the new staff here at Insider Magazine will strive to respectfully follow their act, but only in a very professional, mature manner.

NA NA NA NA NA, WE'RE THE EDITORS NOW, NA NA NA NA NA!!!

Ahem. So here we are, facing a new semester and a new year. Out with the old, in with the new. A clean slate. New and improved. Fresh meat. Kinda neat. Smell my big feet. (sorry). But, how could it ever happen? How could 1993 be any more exciting than 1992?

Easy. And we will be here to bring you all of the latest highlights from your favorite diversions. We'll give you the scoop on the best in town, and the worst around. What's new and what's to do. As the beloved Daneman once quoted with a peculiar gleam in his eye while scratching his scruffy chin, "Insider Magazine takes a skewed, non-traditional look at normal newsworthy things, and provides coverage of things that are in themselves skewed or non-traditional." Well, we're going to make sure that we carry on that tradition of non-tradition that Insider Magazine is known and loved for.

Right here, in our first edition of the year, Courtney Gangemi recorded the best and worst of 1992 on the national music scene. While she was tackling the national scene, Dorian Halkovich was busy recapping the local music action. Speaking of local music, Jacqueline Porter gives us the info on the band called Johnny Socko, which is soon to hit BG.

After rockin' and rollin', Courtney contacted two Bowling Green residents, a student and a professor, who have entered a contest that could reward them $1 million. (Think they'll be generous if one of them wins?) Another best and worst of the past year includes movies, and we have those too. David Huffman is the critic, and he will tell you all about which way the thumbs pointed for 1992's flicks.

The King

Elvis stamps become more plentiful with St. Vincent's output

by Jason Hunt
Insider staff writer

"Hey, look! There's Elvis! And there! And there!"

For those of you who are unhappy with the likeness of Elvis Presley currently residing in your mailboxes, there is a choice. Nine choices, to be exact.

The King of Rock and Roll has been spotted on a set of stamps issued by the island of St. Vincent, in the British West Indies.

"While the post office was trying to decide between the young and the old Elvis, this tiny nation issued nine different stamps showing Elvis in every stage of his career," said Jeffery Franz of The International Collectors Society in Baltimore. The Society is selling sets of the stamps in the U.S.

Each of the stamps is about four times the size of the U.S. stamp, and has a face value of one dollar. They are recognized by postal authorities throughout the world.

"The stamps are really quite stunning, with all the colorful images printed together on the same commemorative sheet," Franz said. He added that he didn't think these stamps would worry the U.S. Postal Service too much.

"When you compare the few thousand sets of the St. Vincent stamps being issued worldwide to the millions of U.S. stamps that will be produced," Franz said, "you can see the appeal that the St. Vincent stamps will have to stamp collectors and Elvis fans alike."

The images include several of Elvis sporting his trademark pompadour, a Seventies Vegas look, and the King in his Army uniform.

The U.S. has issued only one design, the young King, based on the outcome of a national vote taken by the postal service. It was released on Jan. 8—the King's birthday—with the first sales being in Memphis, where people lined up to begin buying them at midnight.

A postal spokesman indicated that at least 300 million U.S. stamps will be printed.

If you would like the St. Vincent stamps, you should contact The International Collectors Society, 111 Water St., Suite 300LH, Baltimore, MD 21202.

Gracing our first cover of the new year are some of the images which made up the entertainment world in 1992. Among them are: Tom Cruise and Jack Nicholson in the flick A Few Good Men, Sharon Stone from a scene in the box office smash Basic Instinct, up-and-coming comedian Denis Leary, Seattle grunge rockers Pearl Jam, Michael Meyers and Dana Carvey in Wayne's World, and lastly the gang from Beverly Hills 90210: Luke Perry, Shannen Doherty, Jennie Garth, and Jason Priestley.

I've got two words for you: Denis Leary

by Kirk Pavelich
Insider Editor-In-Chief

Back in early 1992, if you had mentioned the name Denis Leary, the likely response you would have received would have been something like "Who??" What a difference a year — and a blitz of television exposure — makes.

Nowadays you can barely turn on your T.V. without seeing his dirty blonde hair, his characteristic puffs on cigarette after cigarette and his trademark style of unloading a barrage of words on the you haven't already) is that with a comedy tape, Leary has none of the profanity restrictions present on MTV and network television. And he lets you know that pretty quickly. If that kind of stuff greatly offends you, you probably won't like Leary either. But it is funny and the rantings have real focus, unlike the diatribes of another profane comic, Andrew Dice Clay.

From his view on drugs ("I would never do crack. I would never do a drug named after a part of my own ass.") to his view on the seventies ("There we were in the middle of a sexual revolution wearing clothing

"We need a two-and-a-half hour movie about The Doors? I can sum it up for you in five seconds. I'm drunk I'm nobody. I'm drunk I'm famous. I'm drunk I'm dead."

Denis Leary, comedian

unexpected viewer. Whether it's his now famous rapid-fire sixty second MTV monologues ("No more Marky Mark, no more P.M. Dawn. All I want is Cindy Crawford. Not MTV, CTV") or his commercials with Deion Sanders and Bo Jackson ("I think you hear me knockin' and I think I'm comin' in and I'm bringin' Bo and his big bad hip with me,") Leary is everywhere.

Now he's back again with his one man comedy show, entitled No Cure for Cancer, available on A&M Records. The show features Leary's numerous tirades about what he believes is wrong with the world to hilarious jokes about his own personal problems, including his addictions to smoking and watching television.

But before he delves into the jokes, Leary tries his hand at a folksy, accoustical stab at music titled "Asshole." It's catchy, it's funny, and it makes you want to sing along. "I drive really fast in the ultra-fast lane-While people behind me are going insane-I'm an asshole..." The song really sets the mood for the entire tape and helps you appreciate Leary's twisted and warped mind.

The next thing you'll notice (if that guaranteed we wouldn't get laid,") Leary's mentality offers a brutally honest view of life and the world we live in.

Parts of the act do get a little slow, leading one to believe Leary may be best suited for those short television monologues. But wade through those and don't turn off the tape. More often than not he'll strike a chord seconds later and have you laughing for awhile.

Case in point is when Leary starts in on his view of giving all drugs to less talented performers in order to preserve great ones like Janis Joplin, John Belushi, and Jimi Hendrix and his twisted idea of finding ways to kill off the rest of the Bee-Gees. Stick through it and you'll hear something like: "We need a two-and-a-half hour movie about The Doors? I can sum it up for you in five seconds. I'm drunk I'm nobody. I'm drunk I'm famous. I'm drunk I'm dead."

Keep your eyes open for the release of a book version of No Cure, due out in late fall, and a barrage of movies starring the Boston born comic (four are scheduled to be released in the next year.) Leary is definitely knocking on the door to stardom and whether you like it or not, I think he's coming in.

Denis Leary

THE THRILLER OF THE YEAR IS HERE!

"A VERY HOT, HEART-THUMPING HIT..."

This will be the film that catapults both Leigh and Fonda into the stratosphere... The ending is among the most frightening in recent memory."

Johnny Socko to hit BG Wednesday

by Jacqueline Porter
Insider staff writer

Johnny Socko can only be described as a band with a quest — to be the strangest band in the county.

Originally from Bloomington, Ind., the band is known throughout the area for their unique sound — a bizarre combination of punk funk, rhythm and blues, east coast ska, disco, and even country, resulting in a blend of The Twist Offs, Fishbone, and The Red Hot Chili Peppers. They will be making their Bowling Green debut at the Easystreet Cafe, 104 S. Main St., this Wednesday, Jan. 27.

Johnny Socko's line-up includes drummer Dylan Wissing, trumpet player Eric Evans, saxophone player Josh Silbert, guitarist Joe Welch, bass player Brent Olds, trombone player Chuck Krone, and lead singer Mike Wiltrout.

The name was borrowed from a popular Japanese television show, which described the adventures of a boy named Johnny Socko and

"Instead of putting ourselves into some pretentious category, we prefer to call ourselves stupid."

Josh Silbert, saxophone player in Johnny Socko his robot friend. The show eventually came to the U.S., where its following grew from small to a huge cult audience, much like the band of the same name.

Silbert, who is also a jazz studies major at Indiana University, said it was difficult to explain their music to people in actual words.

"Instead of putting ourselves into some pretentious category, we prefer to call ourselves stupid," Silbert explained. "We all listen to absolutely everything, combine every single sound available and mish-mosh it together into a song — but stupid would also work."

Along with their unique music sense, the band members' fashion sense is also quite unexpected.

"Let's just say we're frequent shoppers at the Salvation Army, into cheesy seventies' clothes, and crazy hats," Silbert elaborated.

Contrary to Silbert's account of the band meeting during a methadone detoxing session, fellow band member Evans explained that Olds, Wiltrout, and Welch were in high school bands together two years ago. They decided to try putting together a ska band.

They contacted Evans and the Wissing, and after jamming for a couple days, they got their first gig — at a Halloween party, Evans said.

"Things went so well that within two weeks they were playing at the local clubs," he explained. "We really scrambled to get a play list together. I mean, it's one thing to play at a party for an hour, but it was completely another to play for three."

Currently, Johnny Socko performs all over Indiana, Kentucky, and now Ohio. Evans said that Bowling Green is in for an experience so unexpected, they don't know what it is, from swinging on banisters, to crazed dancing, to actor Tony Danza showing up and pulling some stunts with the band.

Silbert agreed, advising the crowd to wear a raincoat, and expect the shameless promotion of animal sounds, Salvation Army shopping, and cheap beer.

"I can't tell you what to expect because I don't know myself," he said. "It will probably depend on how much coffee we've been drinking that day."

"Be prepared to dance and have fun," Evans added. "Although I think Tony's booked for that evening."

CINEMARK'S
Woodland Mall Cinema #5
1234 N. Main Street
P.O. Box 49
Bowling Green, Ohio 43402

Just like last semester, Insider Magazine and Woodland Mall Cinemas are teaming up to bring you a weekly movie trivia contest. The rules are the same: you answer the questions correctly, send or hand deliver your entry blank along with your name, address and phone number to Insider Magazine's Film Trivia Contest, 210 West Hall, by Wednesday, Jan. 27. We sift through all of the entries, see who answered the most questions correctly (via the points system) and declare a winner. That lucky person will then receive a call from us along with TWO FREE PASSES to any film of their choice at CINEMARK'S WOODLAND MALL CINEMA.

Aside from being able to award these free passes, we must also mention that Woodland Mall Cinemas offers $3 matinee tickets, has a nifty $3 charge for students who present a valid student ID after 6 p.m., and has those drink holders that all movie theatre seats should be required to have.

EASY: (2 POINTS) Name one of the two biopics (movies about real-life historical figures) playing in theatres across the country.

INTERMEDIATE: (4 POINTS) Name the two films for which Jack Nicholson has received Golden Globe nominations. Go one step further though and tell us what award nominations he received and which ones correspond with each film.

DIFFICULT: (6 POINTS) Before she became famous as "Jo" on Melrose Place, Daphne Zuniga played the spoiled Princess Vespa in what Mel Brooks comedy?

FORMIDABLE: (8 POINTS) Name the 1985 film where Harrison Ford plays a tough Philadelphia cop who delves into Amish country in an attempt to solve a brutal murder.

ALMOST IMPOSSIBLE: (10 POINTS) Which Regulator characters from the original Young Guns flick were killed off before making it to the sequel? You have the option of naming either the character (Billy the Kid) or the real actor's name (Emilio Estevez).

EASY ST. CAFE

104 S. MAIN ST.

by Dave Baskind
The Incredible College of Musical Knowledge

Can it really be? Yes indeedly doodily. It's been one month shy of three dandy, productive, trivia-rific, music-drenched years since Dr. Dave first graced the pages of The BG News. Back then, "Dr. Dave's Incredible College of Musical Knowledge" was found in the Friday section - now it's the Insider. That's not the only change, though. Two editors, three logos, three Prince CDs, one BG fieldhouse, four Top 10 Garth Brooks' albums, two MAC football championships, two Bulls' championships, one beard, and almost 100 winners later, Dr. Dave's college still stands. (By the way, if you missed BG in the Las Vegas Silver Bowl, you missed one of the most amazing finishes in college football this year.) Back then, Bud Carson's Browns and Mike Ditka's Bears both finished playoff seasons. Ahh, memories. Practically no one else from this newspaper still remains from the day I debuted here, February 16, 1990. The print for this column back then was unreadably microscopic, there were 10 questions to be answered and Paula Abdul's "Opposites Attract" was near the top of the charts. The first question from that very first quiz will be revived today as we salute the letter 'L'. L stands for Lori and Lorie, like and love, little and large, and Letterman. What Swedish duo topped the charts in 1989 with "Listen To Your Heart"? If you know, send in your entry, along with your name, address, phone number and best holiday gift, to "Dr. Dave's Quiz," c/o 214 West Hall, BG, OH, 43403 or drop it in the prize-infested wooden box in 210 West Hall before 9 a.m., Jan. 26, 1993 (Yes, 1993. Stop signing your checks and school papers: as 1992). This week's winner will receive a FREE 3-item medium pizza from my friends at Carly Cheena's at Conant and Dudley in Maumee AND a FREE promotional cassette from my buddies at Finders Records And Tapes in downtown Bowling Green. Gee, it's good to be back.

The Good, the Bad, and Local bands have diverse fans

by Dorian Halkovich
Insider staff writer

It wasn't so long ago that we were celebrating the coming of this new year, hoping for better luck, making New Year's resolutions and all-out partying just because New Year's Eve seems to be a legitimate excuse. Throughout all that, we remember the good things of 1992 and all the fun we had at good ole BGSU (that is when we actually finished enough homework to leave the room).

Now, we all know that bar-hopping is the most enthusiastically enjoyed activity in colleges across the country. Whether you went for the thrill of meeting people or the sheer joy of getting totally obliterated (those over 21, of course!), one thing seems to be present in all bars. What is it? MUSIC!

BG has its share of music pumping from speakers and pouring out into the streets, but the live music is what has made more people sit up and take notice. REAL LIVE BANDS in 1992 seemed to bring people out in full force. "The bar fills up when the bands are here," stated Jeff McIntyre of Howard's Club H.

The top local bands in 1992 seem to range from reggae to classic rock and funk. In an estimate from a random survey of students and bar personnel, the top five bands seem to be Redcliff, Blitzen, Groovemaster, Harvest and Positive Sweat. These bands were closely followed by other local bands such as Rizzo and Malika. All the bands were so close it is nearly impossible to put the list in any order...so I won't.

"Redcliff and Blitzen are the two best when it comes to hearing music you know and like," emphasized Amy Deeb, a sophomore public relations major.

Bands such as Blitzen, Redcliff and Harvest are basically cover bands playing well-known favorites in a passionate and lively manner.

Blitzen and Redcliff generally deal with classic rock such as Crosby, Stills and Nash to Boston and others. But Harvest is THE Grateful Dead cover band, complete with a light show that "brings people back for more," according to Matt Wheeler of Easy Street Cafe.

For original tunes, the bands nominated were Redcliff, Groovemaster and Positive Sweat. For those not familiar with Groovemaster, it is a reggae band that serves up a funky beat with a whole lot of fun mixed in.

"They're fun! They communicate with the audience not only through their music but you feel you know them," said Deeb.

As for Positive Sweat, think of a mixture of funk, blues and jazz mixed in with a bit of classical rock and you've got an idea of what they offer.

"These bands have a big draw for the bars. They do pretty well," replied Jim Grant, who is in charge of booking the acts for Howard's Club H.

The offer of live music seems to draw college students into the bars, especially if the band itself is made up of college students, says McIntyre. It also draws in some locals to the bars and provides a melting pot for the "townies" and the students to mix and get along.

That pretty much wraps up the local music scene for 1992. Look for these bands to be showcased in the near future at Howard's, Easy Street and Mark's where they will be sure to play all your favorites and a few extras. Hey, you can even request to hear their songs at Easy Street because, according to Wheeler, they have all the bands' CDs.

Next time you're out having a good time in the bars, take a listen...you might like what you hear.

The past year in retrospect

Before we dive headlong into 1993, we here at Insider Magazine felt it was imperative to have one last tribute to the year that was and sort of pay tribute to the things that we will always remember about 1992. So here goes...

In the first half of the year, Sharon Stone went from an actress who consistently worked 'B' movies to one of the most sought after actresses in all of Hollywood. All it took was her to appear in the box office smash Basic Instinct and perform a number of acrobatic sex acts with Michael Douglas one minute, while killing others with an ice pick the next.

Of course there was up-and-coming comedian Denis Leary, with his brash, from-the-hip monologues on MTV and later with his fast paced commercials on network television, complete with sports stars Deion "Sanderclaus" and Bo Jackson. Talk is that his next step is to the movies, so check in again next year at this time and maybe he'll make our list again.

No one can forget those numerous Beverly Hills 90210 rip-off shows (The Heights, Melrose Place, Freshman Dorm, Malibu Road, and the new Class of '96). But in the end, the old stand-by 90210 still rose head and shoulders above the rest with its continuing story line of the Dylan-Brenda-Kelly love triangle. In fact, that one's still not wrapped up yet.

Michael Meyers and Dana Carvey made the jump from Saturday Night Live to the big screen in the early year box office smash Wayne's World. The movie did so well that production of Wayne's World 2 is slated to begin any time. No way! Way!

The music scene featured the emergence of the Seattle "grunge" sound from groups such as Pearl Jam, Alice in Chains, and Soundgarden, among others. The bands got so hot that by the end of the year they all appeared in the Cameron Crowe flick Singles, starring Bridget Fonda and Matt Dillon. Pearl Jam also performed on the Lollapalooza 2 tour throughout the summer, with other such notables as The Red Hot Chili Peppers.

Lastly, the very end of 1992 saw the emergence of the military-coutroom drama A Few Good Men, starring Tom Cruise, Jack Nicholson, and Demi Moore. Nicholson's performance as the mar-lacial Col. Nathan Jessup was so good that something will definitely be wrong if he doesn't walk away with the Academy Award for Best Supporting Actor later in 1993.

Howard's End

Hits & Misses in

by David Huffman
Insider film critic

Nineteen-hundred-ninety-two was certainly not a stellar year for the movies. I left more theaters growling last year than any year I can remember. Now that it's 1993 I am faced with the difficult task of compiling my best and worst lists for last year's releases. I'll start with the worst because they're easier and so that I can end on a positive note with the best.

WORST:

5. Once Upon a Crime - This unfunny comedy's best scenes involved Sean Young trying to kill a dog and the other had Cybill Shepherd and Jim Belushi in it, if that says anything.

4. Stop or My Mom Will Shoot - This is the token Sylvester Stallone movie on every critic's worst list for the year. Apparently the size difference between Sly and Estelle Getty was so funny that the producers decided that a script wasn't needed.

3. Home Alone 2: Lost in New York - It wasn't funny. It wasn't funny. It really, really wasn't funny.

2. Under Siege - Easily the most repulsive film of the year, this Steven Seagal crime against the film medium has somehow ended up on a few critics' 10 best lists.

1. Medicine Man - A very tough call between this film and Under Siege; however, the amazingly stupid premise of this Sean Connery-Lorraine Bracco film was the film last year that I just couldn't wait for its end. Not only was it insulting to anyone who has had junior high science, but it also had the most hilariously inept scene of the year as Connery spoke to Bracco as she lounged topless on a rock - not a pretty sight.

and Pretty Sad of 1992

'92 Cinema

Runners up: Sneakers, Boomerang, Far and Away, Year of the Comet, Mo' Money.
BEST

5. The Mambo Kings - An excellent homage to '50s melodrama with great music, beautiful cinematography and wonderful performances by Armand Assante and Antonio Banderas (making his English-language film debut) made this one of the most entertaining films of the year.

4. Aladdin - Disney is on a definite roll. Robin Williams Genie, the great songs and fabulous animation make this an amazing experience. It's even better if you see it in a theater devoid of annoying children.

3. Husbands and Wives - I'll be the first to admit that I am highly biased toward any Woody Allen film. He is, in my opinion, America's most brilliant filmmaker (to hell with Scorsese). Woody is never afraid to experiment with his films and he took experimentation to the extremes with great success in this film that refused to let the camera remain stationary.

2. The Player - Robert Altman is another favorite director of mine and after a major slump in the eighties, he seems to be back in top form. This brilliant black comedy starring Tim Robbins is twice as funny to film fans.

1. Howards End - A perfectly written, constructed, photographed and acted movie, Howards End has been around for the entire year and people are still talking about it. Emma Thompson is a front runner for the best actress Oscar this year for her performance in director James Ivory's best film to date.

These are the best films I've seen. There are, however, several other films that I haven't seen yet that could easily change this list. They are: The Crying Game, One False Move, Malcolm X, Enchanted April and Damage.

Country moves to mainstream

by Courtney Gangemi
Insider staff writer

1992 has come to a close, and the music industry has left us with some hot sellers and a few albums that belong in our porcelain fixtures.

According to area record outlets such as Finders and The Record Den, the best selling LP of 1992 was Garth Brooks' No Fences. However, that was about all that was agreed upon as the best of 1992.

The Record Den found that Metallica's self-titled release and Kriss Kross' Totally Krossed Out were consistent sellers every day. Finders argued that Eric Clapton's Unplugged LP was a hot item throughout the second half of the year.

That gives us a Top 4 of what can be considered the best sellers of 1992, but is there a fifth? Both stores believed Billy Ray Cyrus' Some Gave All deserved mention as the fifth best seller of the year.

So for those of you keeping score at home, here are the official Bowling Green Top 5 of 1992.

- #1 Garth Brooks - No Fences
- #2 New Metallica
- #3 Kris Kross
- #4 Eric Clapton - Unplugged
- #5 Billy Ray Cyrus - Some Gave All

Jim Cumber of Madhatter Music Company in Bowling Green said he believes that Rave 'til Dawn, a techno-dance sampler deserved an honorable mention.

What about those artists who probably never should have released an album in 1992? The worst busts of last year were unanimously the releases of new albums by Bruce Springsteen and Sinead O'Connor, Human Touch by the

Garth Brooks

Boss and Am I Not Your Girl? by the bald-headed one.

Both albums sold extremely poorly in all three record stores in town, compared with the sales of these artists' last albums. We'll have to wait and see how they rebound from their busts and how they do in the future.

King explores the mind

Is it horror-fiction or really social commentary?

by Mary Katharine Okorn
Insider Book Critic

Stephen King opens for us a dark world of hauntingly familiar internal horrors in Gerald's Game, his first book to explore the mind of Woman.

Handcuffs, a wife and husband, a bed and a solitary house in the woods may seem an idyllic setting to some, or at least the setting for a harmless game, but for Jessie Burlingame, it becomes the setting of sneering contempt and bitter revelation.

Handcuffed to the bed by police-issued M-17 adjustable cuffs, her naked lawyer husband Gerald kneeling over her, Jessie Burlingame realizes she is no longer sexually aroused by the bondage game. "This has lost a lot of its charm for me," she says. Trouble is, Gerald thinks Jessie's objections are part of the game. When Jessie decides she doesn't want to play anymore, the petulance of a child turns into the danger of an adult.

The events that follow leave Jessie horrifyingly alone — handcuffed to a bed. She has plenty of time to contemplate the things in her life that led to her imprisonment, and realizes it wasn't a single mistake she made, but the mindset of a society. The crucial question for her, for all women, and especially for men is, why did he need to handcuff her? Why not scarves or a blindfold so she had a means of escape?

The answer seems to be power: the real feeling of power men feel when women are truly submissive, by will or by force. However, to this answer King adds more — and this is where reading the book is like muddling through murky water.

King undermines the pertinence of the feminist role in Gerald's Game by providing too many answers. It just isn't believable when Jessie develops three personalities to help her cope with her past. Jessie's realization that men get off on dominating women through sex is somewhat belittled by the introduction of a cannibalistic dog who feasts on human flesh.

The trouble with this book is that it doesn't know what it wants to be. Is it horror-fiction or social commentary? Feasibly, it could be both.

Stephen King

But the issue of feminism, which seems to be the main theme, gets lost halfway through and Gerald's Game becomes a trademark Stephen King, complete with body parts and ghosts.

In this era of Basic Instinct and Bodies of Evidence, Stephen King asks us to consider the real motivation behind the bondage game — and the picture he paints isn't a pretty one.

Gerald's Game will leave you with some troubling questions, and women won't look at their fathers, brothers, and lovers in the same light for a long while. If this is King's purpose, his purpose is well served. King typically asks us to see things we may not want to see, but sometimes it's just too much. For Jessie, her situation is real. For women, her situation hits too close to home. For a horror-fiction book, Jessie's plight simply doesn't offer enough tangible horror to satisfy a loyal fan of Stephen King blood and guts. His attempt to satiate the gore lust of his readers doesn't quite mesh with the feminist tone of the book.

BG features two Anthem finalists

Out with the old and in with the new! "The Star Spangled Banner" may just become the national anthem of the past.

Bowling Green has two finalists in Anthem! America, a worldwide competition seeking a new national anthem. University English instructor Suzanne Heba joins student Andrew Buskey as two of the 60 finalists in the contest.

The winner of Anthem! America will receive a grand total of $1 million and the winning song will be submitted to Congress for adoption as our new national anthem.

Heba is not too sure of her chances at winning the million dollars: "I have not heard any of the other entries...but I would pay my bills and take a vacation on spring break," she said.

Buskey read about the contest in the Cincinnati Enquirer. "I was just flipping through the Arts and Leisure section and it was in a little box in the lower corner of the paper," he said.

And what will this University student do with the $1 million if he wins? "I'd set myself up: an apartment, car and pay for the rest of my college education. I'd set myself up independently," Buskey said.

The President of Anthem! America, Anders Skaar, founded the Pro American Music's first worldwide contest. According to Skaar, he hopes that this competition will be the first of many. The proceeds raised will be donated to help fight the AIDS crisis and assist the homeless, as well as give song writers exposure.

In true American spirit, the public will decide the winner of the contest and what may be the new national anthem.

Skaar will release five albums, with 12 songs on each album. The public has the option to purchase these albums and vote which songs they would like to see as our next national anthem. Winner of the votes takes the grand prize million, with that winner being announced on March 14, 1993.

According to Heba, she heard about the contest two days before deadline, and composed her song and lyrics. This song could be our next anthem.

What makes Anthem! America so unique is "the scope," says Buskey. "There are people from all over the States. The new anthem will describe America as it is today," he added.
